"THE blood of the people! changeless tide through century,
creed and race,

Still one, as the sweet salt sea is one, though tempered by sun and place,

The same in ocean currents and the same in sheltered seas:
Forever the fountain of common hopes and kindly sympathies.
Indian and Negro, Saxon and Celt, Teuton and Latin and Gaul, Mere surface shadow and sunshine, while the sounding unifies all!

One love, one hope, one duty theirs! no matter the time or kin,
There never was a separate heart-beat in all the races of men."

The AMERICAN MISSIONARY plans to maintain a high standard as a missionary magazine for the year 1904.

It will be published by the American Missionary Association, monthly, in ten numbers, July and August being omitted.

The field represented in the mission work of this Association is increasingly urgent and important, and the necessity for larger support is apparent.

Brief and interesting items from mission fields, descriptive articles concerning different institutions, discussion of fundamental problems of national importance will appear in the magazine during the year.

Subscription rate fifty cents per year.

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of income to keep pace with the imperative demand of work. This increase can be reached only by regular and larger contributions from the churches, the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our educational institutions, are needed to receive the constantly increasing number of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, educated and devoted, for these churches.

3. FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS—to purchase implements for agricultural training; to erect shops and furnish tools and materials for instruction and use in the mechanical arts, for carpenters, blacksmiths, tinmen, harness and shoemakers; and to supply the girls' industrial rooms.

4. Our work in Porto Rico calls for two new school buildings.

No. 7.

Our Churches must needs be missionary for the sake of their own power. They need the reactive influence upon themselves. They need to be constantly confirmed in the power of the truth which they hold. If they are not militant, they cease to be churches. Militant churches need to have victories. They need to see them. They need the inspirations which come, under the manifestations of their power, over those whom they seek to save. They need the correction of selfishness from terminating themselves with themselves.

Otherwise they grow selfish and worldly; they accept the secondary blessings of a faith which, as it dies out, will lose even these, and prove anew that "from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he seemeth to have."

When churches thus seek to enjoy the comforts and consolations of faith with no forth-putting energies to bring others into the knowledge and love of God; when they cease self-renunciations and the missionary spirit, the "falling away" will come. If Heaven itself were ever to be a cessation of out-spreading and out-going service, it would be false to its name and would cease to represent God.

The Congo Atrocities. The iniquities practiced among the Africans in the Independent State of the Congo are attracting the authorities of civilized people everywhere, but especially in England. The country which has been given control in that land is Belgium. By the agreement of "the powers," Leopold II was recognized as sovereign of this new state, which includes a territory of more than a million square miles, and numbers between twenty and thirty million people. The territory, for example, is four times as large as France. The proposed Free State of Congo was to exist for the benefit of the native Africans, but it has been turned from this humane and benevolent purpose of "the powers" to the exploitation of its resources by white adventurers, whose treatment of the natives has been described as "more than inhuman, it is positively devilish." Upon representations of missionaries and others, which cannot be gainsaid, a strong memorial to interfere has been presented in England to the British House of Commons, and an appeal to the United States has been advocated to act with Great Britain in the matter, inasmuch as this country was largely responsible for the creation of the Congo Free State. England is much aroused over this cruel oppression of the black man by the white man, and it is full time that our Christianity and philanthropy in this part of the world should exert all the influence that can be brought to bear to suppress the horrors now existing among the defenceless Africans. Already a memorial from the chairman and members of several missionary societies—abounding in documents and facts—has been presented to Congress and now rests with the Committee on Foreign Relations, to be taken up in December—which represents interference not only to be "a right but an imperative duty."

General Conference Resolutions of M. E. Church.

The recent General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church assembled at Los Angeles, Cal., in view of the horrors perpetrated upon the native people of the Congo Valley, passed a resolution urging Congress to investigate the charges, and, if they were sustained, to unite with other western powers to secure the humane and just government originally guaranteed by King Leopold and the Belgian Government. We trust that our own Congregational churches at the National Council in October will not fail to pass resolutions to be forwarded to Congress which shall represent their conscience and Christianity, and that all missionary societies will appeal in behalf of the bitterly-oppressed people of the Congo.

Memorial now before Congress.

In the Memorial now before Congress—in which we are assured that President Roosevelt has already expressed his sympathy—some of the reports from missionaries contain fearful accounts of white depravity and cruelty. The women and children are fleeing to the mission seeking protection. A white officer, unacquainted with the missionary whom he was addressing, after a cruel raid, jokingly remarked that he had "killed many and secured a fine lot of curios," and that while his soldiers were firing upon the Negro villages the people ran wildly about crying "Sheppite, Sheppite"—their name for the Rev. William H. Sheppard, whom they were beseeching to come to their aid.

This devoted and able missionary, Mr. Sheppard of the Southern Presbyterian Church, whose missions in Africa were established about fourteen years ago, was educated at Tuscaloosa, Ala., and his wife is a graduate of Talladega College. They have been at their present location in Ibanj about five years.

Fisk and Talladega in Central Africa. Miss Althea M. Brown, a native of Missouri, whose letter to the Fisk University Christian Endeavor Society is given below, is a graduate of Fisk University of 1901, having been at Fisk eight years. She was converted to the Christian life and faith in the early part of her course at Fisk, and soon made known her purpose to devote her life as a missionary in Africa. She worked her way through college by service in families and teaching during vacations. After graduation—in the college course—she took a year of training for mission work in Chicago, and joined the mission directed by Mr. Sheppard in 1902.

One more year has been spent in the work of my heart's desire, and it has been one of the sweetest and most precious years of my life. The Lord has been good to me; given me good health; and, best of all, loosened my tongue, so that I am now speaking quite freely in the native language, telling the precious old story of the Saviour's love. However, that which has been so satisfying and uplifting is the wonderful way in which I have seen the love of God and the power of the Gospel of Christ manifested among this people who have been sitting in the most dense darkness so long. Their hearts seem so hungry, so thirsty and so ready for the blessed message our Lord left for them. Many are being born into His kingdom. The seed sown by the early missionaries is now springing up into everlasting life. No year since the beginning of the mission has been more fruitful than the past year. The Lulua and Baluba people are ready and eager to put aside the old superstitions; they grasp foreign ideas readily and are easily civilized. It is among these that we have the most of our pupils for our school, evangelists and converts. Seven hundred of them united with the Church last year, making a total of nine hundred and twenty baptized into the Church during 1903. The number received this past year surpassed the numbers received during the previous seven years by sixty, showing how mightily the Spirit, power and love of God are working among them. It is true that there are failures on the part of some who enter the Christian faith, yet, on the other hand, there are many who are zealous, steadfast, earnest and faithful.

ALTHEA M. BROWN.

Our work at Ibanj is principally among the Bakuba. As I have already said, they are just now becoming interested in the Gospel. Formerly, only a very few attended church, and these few were mostly small girls, boys and women; now they are coming by scores, whole villages sometimes come, even the old gray-haired chiefs, grandfathers and mothers. They are not only listening to the message of salvation, life and love, but they are also accepting it.

The Bakuba are the most intelligent, thrifty and independent people of Central Africa. They live in good, well-built houses, of two and three rooms, and are very clean about their person and homes. They have a great many industries of remarkable interest; they are fine weavers and blacksmiths; they have large fields of corn, peas, pumpkins, etc.; they are great and successful hunters; their women, many of whom are very pretty, clean and lady-like, do beautiful fancy work.

Mr. Sheppard has just returned from a month's itinerating tour among the Bakuba. He brings back a most encouraging report. He was warmly received by all the villages. He visited all of our evangelists, who are doing a very promising and satisfactory work. They have built large churches (sheds), and have large schools and catechumen classes. He said he preached to large crowds every day; all seemed interested. He also visited the king's own village, the capital of this great tribe of more than two hundred and fifty thousand souls. The king seems interested and wants the evangelists to continue to teach and preach in his village. We are earnestly praying that the seed sown during this tour may mean much fruit for the Master; especially do we pray that it may soften the heart of the king, for, although he is very intelligent and politic, he is exceedingly superstitious. If we can win him, it will not be difficult to win his subjects, who all but worship him.

Our work among the women continues to grow in interest and is becoming far-reaching in its influence. It is strengthening their growth in the faith, bringing them and their children into closer touch with the Church, and making them better wives, mothers and homekeepers.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard will be leaving for the homeland about the middle of March. Then I shall be quite alone, with my hands more than full. I dare say they will visit Fisk soon after their arrival. I know you will do all you can to make them happy, for they are worthy. Then, too, they will be most interesting people. I shall miss them almost sorrowingly; I have learned to think a great deal of them. We have had our meals together ever since I came. They are now boarding with me. I shall soon have to take my meals all alone. Yet, I have no fear, for I shall be so busy all the while that I shall not have time for home-sickness; then, my Lord is always near. I hope one of you dear girls can soon come to join me in this work. The field is very ready. Come and help us!

Thanking you again for your love, interest and prayers, I am with love,

Yours in His service,

ALTHEA M. BROWN.

Tougaloo University

was founded by the American Missionary Association in 1869. It is located on the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, seven miles from the State capital. Its campus is the center of a plantation of 500 acres of land and is rich for agricultural and educational uses. In its work and aim the institution is, first of all, Christian. Beginning with ordinary common and high-school studies, it furnishes higher education to those who can attain it and who give promise of exceptional usefulness. With this the industrial features of education receive special emphasis—agriculture, woodworking, ironworking, bricklaying and other handicrafts for young men, and all the departments of woman's work for young women are carefully taught.

The teachers' training course is especially adapted for those preparing to teach. A Biblical course prepares those who expect to be preachers. The Rev. Frank Goodrich Woodworth, D.D., is the president, with twenty-seven teachers. Said Governor Stone, in his message to the Legislature a few years ago: "I do not hesitate to express the belief that no appropriation ever made to the education of the colored race has ever yielded as good returns."

KETURAH IN TOUGALOO.

BY A TEACHER.

The term of a colored county school in Mississippi was just closed. As the teacher was leaving, the pupils, recalling the gracious life she had lived among them, her work through the week and on Sunday, her improvement of the schoolhouse and grounds, her interest in their homes, where she had helped in sewing, in cooking, in rendering them more attractive, her efforts to make wiser and better their lives, were most reluctant to part with her. Keturah said, "We have had many teachers, but we sure never did see any like you, miss. I wish we all could be like you." The teacher replied: "I used to be just as you are, girls, until I went to Tougaloo. Whatever I have done for you has come from what was done for me there." Keturah then and there made her resolution to get to Tougaloo. She had no money, but, upon her teacher's advice, wrote to ask for a chance to work her way and was fortunate enough to secure it. In the fall, when she went, she entered a new world. It had been a drive of thirty miles before the railroad station was reached; then came the wonderful trip on the cars, half enjoyable, half fearsome, for she had never seen a railroad before. With a company of others she walked from Tougaloo station the half mile to the institution. Its dozen or more buildings, scattered over a large campus, made it seem like a village set in a place of unusual beauty. Keturah thought it "fine," not knowing that that is called one of the most lovely places in the State.

Passing the gate, directly before her was the largest building she had ever seen, Beard Hall, which was to be her home. She had never expected to live in a place like this. Other buildings about looked pleasant, and she noted especially through the trees the church with its graceful white tower. A sound of music, such as she had never heard, added to her wonderment, and someone eagerly told her of the organ in the church. She followed other girls into Beard Hall, feeling strangely, for this was the first time she had ever climbed stairs. Welcomed kindly by the matron she was assigned to her room, which, simple though it was, seemed "fine" to her. The ordeal of examination was a trying one, for a written examination was a new experience; but, thanks to her last teacher's excellent work, she was able to enter the highest grammar-school grade.

Then began the regular routine of school life. She was to work her way, which meant thirty-three hours a week in the laundry, her duties being so arranged that she lost little of school work. Besides her books to study, she found she must attend classes in sewing and cooking. This seemed almost a waste of time to her, so eager was she for the knowledge of books. She asked to be excused from this, but the President declined to permit her to give them up, for which she afterwards gratefully thanked him. She had agriculture also as a study, partly from books and partly from observation. The work of the plantation, to which she had been accustomed—for she had hoed and planted, picked cotton, and even plowed—appeared in a new light and with new possibilities. She learned of crop relations, soils, fertilizers, to judge of horses, cattle, swine; and in all ways she found her horizon of life widening. As she saw the shops for the boys, and heard them talk of their wood and ironwork and masonry, new ideas of the significance of skilled work came to her. She saw the large garden and plantation that supplied nearly all the meat and vegetables for the dining hall, with its two hundred and fifty people to be fed each meal. As she came into contact with students much older and more advanced in the academy and normal departments, and knew of the work that some did in the outside primary school as teachers, under a pedagogy instructor, her very association became educative. She looked with a little awe on the dignified collegians, few, but giving an idea of much to be attained by those lower down in the school. The whole spirit of the place spoke of labor and its dignity, of earnestness and honesty in performance, of higher and broader things yet to be attained, and she began to catch the spirit.

Among her pleasantest experiences was keeping house with three other girls for two months at Berkshire Cottage under a teacher's direction, where she grew familiar with the details of housekeeping and learned many a lesson of neatness and economy. Music she thoroughly enjoyed, not only in her grade at their regular singing but the organ, piano and vocal recitals; the concerts, with the large chorus, gave her a new conception of music, its power and value.

Her social ideas grew clearer. She found young men and young women meeting daily in class, at table, on the walks and in frequent socials in a pleasant, sensible way, giving her new views as to the higher values of social life. Quick to notice, she learned much from her observation of the teachers. She had seen few "white folks" and had not come into any contact with them; but from the life of the white teachers and their devotion to their work she gained social ideals and inspirations and ideals of character. She came to realize that the school was strongly religious, though it was with a different conception of religion from that which she had known. The Sundays were different. At nine o'clock came the Sunday-school, with much singing, recitation of Scripture and careful class study. After the lesson study, a review of the lesson by the superintendent, either by questions to or by the school, or a brief sermon on it. At a quarter of eleven was the church service. The organ music, the anthems and hymns were "fine" to Keturah. The responsive readings, the united repetition of the General Confession, General Thanksgiving and Apos-ties' Creed, the response to the prayer were all new and strange. The sermons Keturah did not quite understand, nor did she like them at first. The preacher did not shout nor use the phrases to which she had been accustomed, but talked quietly and simply. "Well," she said to one of the girls, "if you call that good preaching I hope I'll never hear any poor."

Gradually, however, as the year went on, she began to see that preaching and religion meant far more than she had realized, and from the sermons began to get clearer ideas of God and duty. Truer ideas came also as she studied the Bible daily in school or went to the Young Women's Christian Association meetings or the meetings held alternate Sunday evenings by the Sunday-school teachers with their classes. She grew into a larger sense of her own personal dignity and worth, and saw that not only herself but her people also should and could attain a more intelligent, self-respecting life, with higher thought and larger purpose. The remembrance of her old-life conditions, the one-roomed cabin, the narrow range of religion and life, grew irksome to her. She became profoundly dissatisfied; the old life could never be hers again. With this discontent growing, was it well that she had come to school?

On Sunday afternoons the President liked to have students go and talk with him on moral and religious matters, and she frequently went. She spoke near the year's close of this dissatisfaction, and he said that he was glad, for dissatisfaction is the nurse of progress. It was a holy discontent. He showed her more clearly than she had seen that the training of the year, its books, its industries, its social life, its religious training, had fitted her to go back and minister to her people, to help them change their condition and share in her new and larger life; and he again emphasized what she had so often heard from teachers and the pulpit, that the great ideal of Tougaloo is not to fit young men and women to use books and tools simply, but rather to be larger in thought and feeling, to live more morally, to go into their world, whether larger or smaller, with the great ideal of loving service to God and His needy ones as the noblest thing in life. As Keturah returned to her home she said, "That shall be my purpose, and may God help me to realize it." In good degree she did realize it, and it was not a long time when we learned that the community where she had gone were saying, "Thank God for Tougaloo"; "God bless Tougaloo."

WHAT A STUDENT IN TALLADEGA COLLEGE THINKS ABOUT THE RACE PROBLEM.

The most difficult problem that confronts our country to-day is the so-called "Race Problem." Many have pointed out different methods by which this might be solved. Some have said that industry is the solution; some say the acquisition of property would take care of the problem, while others assert that education is the method of solving it.

I believe that none of these nor all of them together are sufficient, and that only the religion of Christ has the secret by which this problem can be finally solved. First, let us see what the race problem is. In the white race it is prejudice, on account of the Negro's former servitude, his features, his black face and his rough hair. In the Negro race prejudice comes from his memories and feeds upon the horrible lynchings and other wrongs committed against him by his white brother. This prejudice is a question of morals. To cherish it is a sin against moral law, and, consequently, a sin against God. It is not a sin to be unable to do skilled labor, it is not a sin to be poor, it is not a sin to be ignorant. I do not deny that poverty and ignorance may lead to sin; but in themselves they are not sin. Race prejudice is sin.

Let us see if education will destroy this prejudice. Dr. Washington and Dr. DuBois, for example, are educated men of the colored race. When Dr. Washington dined with the President what were some of the immediate results. The papers were filled with criticisms, and all the talk in the South was of a Negro eating with a white man. He was scoffed at, not because the Negro was uneducated, but because of the so prevalent prejudice. I believe that if one were to take a Negro and let him attain every possible intellectuality, and set him down in a land where this prejudice exists, he would be, in the eyes of the white man, no more acceptable than the ignorant Negro. Certainly, education on the part of a Negro does not solve the problem.

On the other hand, will industry solve it? Dr. Washington, in an article in the Southern Workman, related the following for an example: A certain Negro farmer raised 250 bushels of potatoes to the acre, and, as a consequence, the white farmers from all over the State came to see by what method he was so successful. This he points out as one way in which the problem may be solved. Take the example now a step further. Let the same Negro attend the white farmers' meeting. He is not given a seat with them. He is there only as an inferior, and only to feel the discrimination and shame of color. Let the Negro possess all scientific knowledge that it is possible for him to attain; give him the power to raise a thousand bushels of potatoes to the square inch, and let him be where the race prejudice is, this problem faces him still. Ask the reasons why no colored men are allowed to work in many places where they could work equally well, or perhaps better, and the only answer that we receive is, "He is a nigger." If industry can overcome prejudice why does it not do it? As a fact, Negro industry does not conquer race prejudice.

Moreover, let us see if financial or commercial success will do this. Some say: "Let the Negro secure money and he will be given his place." Will he? In my own town some colored men proposed to set up a certain business. They had made all necessary arrangements to this end. They had paid their money and were expecting their goods in return. But, to their surprise, what did they receive? A notice that the company could not furnish them the goods. Why was this? The company was a white one and had been influenced by white competitors to refuse goods to Negroes. People say a Negro's money will spend anywhere that a white man's will, but if a Negro were to have the gold of Carnegie and the financial ability of Morgan he would still be the object of prejudice and would be kept back. To you who are seeking to solve the race problem with money, the reply will come like that of Peter to Simon the sorcerer, "Thy money perish with thee." It is not a question of gold; it is a deeper question.

Do not understand me to deny that education and industry and possessions are helpful. They are very helpful. But these are only natural means to an end. Christianity, pure and undefiled, is both the means and the end. You remember the story of the vision upon the housetop, how the voice said, "Arise, Peter, kill and eat." Listen to Peter as he says, "Not so, Lord, for I have never eaten that which was common or unclean." Recall how God reproved him, "What God has cleansed, call not thou unclean." When God has accepted the Negro as His redeemed and renewed child, this should kill prejudice on the part of every other child of God. This alone will.

Our first and highest duty is to God. We may serve God by serving our fellow-men. No man who cherishes prejudice in his heart can rightly serve his fellow-man, and he is not fit to work for God. The true Christian has always in his heart the Golden Rule. How far better would the laws of Alabama and her sister States be if legislators would ask themselves, "What would Christ do?" Whenever men get to the place where they are directed by true Christian motives, race hatreds and race prejudice will be things of the past. When people see God as our common Father and human beings as brothers the race problem will fade away. The Negroes of our country are not looking for what is called "social equality." They are only praying for a man's chance to work out the powers that God gives. They ask that no prejudice shall deny them the just chances of life. We are told that sometime when the cycle of years has rolled round there is to be a golden age, when all men will dwell together in peace and righteousness. God speed the day, and let not the shining thread of hope become tangled in the web of circumstance so that we lose sight of it. Give us here and there, and now and then, some little foretaste of the future golden age, that we may more patiently await its coming.

Be strong!

Say not the days are evil—Who's to blame?

And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame!

Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!

It matters not how deep intrenched the wrong,

How hard the battle goes, the day how long.

Faint not! Fight on! To-morrow comes the song.

—MALTBIE DAVENPORT BABCOCK.

A TEACHER'S LETTER FROM THE GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL, AT MOORHEAD, MISS.

We read about Arizona skies! You should come under those of western Mississippi in the Yazoo delta country—a region second only to the Nile delta in richness of soil, and vying with California in wonder of bird-life and gigantic forests.

Here, in this Mississippi alluvial region, where the Negro constitutes five-eighths of the population, he has the fewest rights and the least consideration. The men and women alike work, chiefly in the cotton-fields, and know but little else than of cotton. That the American Negro, as a race, has made marvelous progress since emancipation is an established fact; but that in so many parts of the Southland no uplifting influences have yet been felt, is equally true. In more remote districts conditions have not improved for thirty years, and the ignorance and superstition are incredible. In the churches one will hear marvelous things. One old uncle recently set forth the virtue of perseverance as illustrated by Noah, who “kep’ on preachin’ to people who wouldn’t lis’en, en done nebber git disencouraged. Ole man Nora, he preached by the sound of his hammer, a-hammerin’ up and down de streets ob Jeruzalem a hundred en twenty years!”

Mr. Beecher once said that a man must be judged by the distance he had traveled from his starting-point. The progress of the Negro along industrial and educational lines is due to the schools established throughout the South at the close of the war by various Christian organizations. Industrial training has been included in the instruction of college, normal and graded schools with most gratifying results. The latest statistics on this point are most interesting. Of all Negro criminals confined in Southern prisons, “ninety per cent. have never learned a trade;” a large per cent. are absolutely illiterate, and only two students of those graduated from the fifteen largest schools for Negroes have ever been in prison. Christian education does save.

The best building connected with the Girls’ Industrial School of Moorhead, Miss., was put up by a Negro carpenter, and Negro labor was employed throughout. It stands for brains, industry and honest work, and is the advertisement its builder wished it to be.

This school in the Yazoo delta is the only one of its kind within a radius of seventy-seven miles. It ministers to a population of two hundred and fifty thousand Negroes. It is known through all this region. Our nearest neighbor, “Aunt Rose,” an ex-slave, calls it the “House of Principle.” Not long ago Aunt Rose undertook to remonstrate with Uncle Jimmy for beating his wife. He indignantly denied the charge. “I treat Eliza with expect; I treats everybody with expect," adding, as he turned wrathfully away, "en I likes to be expected myself." Inquiring recently about Aunt Rose's rheumatism, I learned that she had "jist been cured of a misery in hea' stomach by a dose of nine bullets"—cunning little bird shot. She has many a tale of slave days to tell, and the memories of her babies and husband, sold from her, seem more vivid to her mind than the happenings of to-day. She always concludes her story with "Ole Marse, he's bu'n-nin' now;" or "he's sho' gwine ter bu'n!"

To turn from this prophetic literalism, our school is in excellent running order. We have more students than there is room for, and scores are refused admission. Every inch of room is crowded. We greatly need a sewing-room and a room also where girls could congregate for reading. Our girls take to the industries readily. They learn to cook in an orderly, systematic way, and nearly every day part of the dinner is prepared by the cooking-class. The girls are well trained in all kinds of housework. The hearts of most of you would be filled with pity if you could see the cabins from which they come, and your hearts would be gladdened to see what transformations are made when they return and make clean, good, virtuous homes where before was squalor and ignorance.

SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

"THE STRENGTH OF THE HILLS IS HIS ALSO."

REV. S. B. GROVES, WILLIAMSBURG, KY.

Let a globe trotter accustomed to the culture and convenience of northern cities, pass through the Appalachian highland section of our country with swift flights and short stops; let him view the native life without any brotherly interest or sympathy and it is easily supposable that he can go away with the notion that the country is poor and behind the times, and that the people are hopelessly sunk in ignorance and petty vices. Such a man would see plenty of shabby little towns; meager farms, consisting of little patchy fields set against the steep hillsides and full of stones and stumps; small log or frame cabins some of them with stick-chimneys and windowless, with floors of earth; unkempt yards, shabby outbuildings, thin undersized stock, "razor-back" hogs, rags and dirt in abundance. He might go away thinking that the whole section was a sort of rural slum to the rest of the country and settle down to the same indifference or contemptuous nopelessness with which he regards slums in general.

But let a Christian man live in this mountain country even a short time, and try to make a sympathetic study of the people with a view to understanding and helping them, his convictions will differ very decidedly from the transient visitor's impressions. He will see all the latter saw and feel it a great deal more, but he will see that these things on the surface do not determine the real nature and quality of the people. He will see that these drawbacks are largely due to natural causes, that they are no more than that which probably characterized the prevailing rural life of many other sections two or three generations ago; that fundamental, homely virtues exist and are actively exercised; and that here, as elsewhere, are human beings stirred with the touch of God to feel their insufficiency, and to struggle upward against it. The homes are poor, but the people now are wanting better ones, and are building better. The schools are of low grade, but teachers and parents are trying hard both to raise the quality of education and to extend the time of it. The preaching and Sunday-school teaching is often exceedingly crude and literalistic rather than intelligent and spiritual, but the people are hungry for sound doctrine and inspiring truth, and not a few recognize such when they hear it. If one is looking for a finished product of humanity, then he need not come among the Mountaineers but if he believes God is still making men and making a new world through new men, if he can see light as well as darkness, if he loves to take dull ore and transform it into shining articles of use and beauty, if he is willing to work and let patience rule, to sow and trust God for sure harvests, then life among these glorious mountains is wonderfully sweet, and work among the simple-hearted people of mighty possibilities becomes an absorbing passion. There is not only the joy of effort, but there is the joy of swift and manifold success.

Nowhere is it possible to see more rapid and far-reaching transformation than appears in many of the pupils in our mountain boarding-schools. Boys and girls come from homes where they had no chance to develop life on any but its lowest material side. They come, awkward and uncouth, in body and mind, not conscious of what they want, but certain they want something better than they have known hitherto. A few months in school, and, lo! the eye has brightened, the whole face has lighted up, the intellectual is evidently in sharp conflict with the lower nature, the step becomes firmer and more decisive; a growing man or woman possessed of ideas and purposes and will to execute looks out at you. The change is not marked in every case, but it is as astonishing as gratifying in many cases. Here, as elsewhere, the Gospel as interpreted by Christian education proves itself the power of God. Here, as much as anywhere in the wide field of the world, a man teaching the gospel by word and deed may feel himself at one with Him who said, "Behold, I make all things new," and may enter into the highest of all earthly joy—the joy of helping people to grow and seeing them grow upward toward full-statured manhood and womanhood in Christ Jesus.

In vacation our pupils go back to their homes to draw contrasts and to spread ideas. At the close of their school careers many are absorbed into the home-life of the section. Wherever they go, they carry something of the modern spirit with them. The old house never seemed so small and inconvenient as it does now; and when their day of opportunity comes it will be replaced by a better one. The rural school will be toned up, for they have had at least a taste of what education really is. Here and there a thoughtful hearer and a willing worker is being provided for the church of the future. Thus the Kingdom comes partly with observation and partly without it. For, while we see results sufficient to cheer and satisfy, we know the larger, more glorious fruitage is to be gathered in the years to come.

The eggs in the nightingale's nest transform into plumage and song ;
Out of the acorn at last comes the oak tree stately and strong ;
Out of the savage soul, out of the thrall and the slave
Come patriot, martyr and saint, the noble, the true and the brave ;
Out of poor ignorance, truth, and out of man's fetters release ;
Out of the tempest the calm, and out of the battle sweet peace.
For the Master who made us, made all with a wisdom transcending our thought,

Infusing that wisdom in all the countless creations He wrought.
And stars in their courses, and men, or nations, the lowest and best,
Are neither no more nor no less than the trees or the eggs in the nest.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE IN OUR MISSION IN NORTHERN ALASKA.

In the summer of 1890 two young men, at the call of the American Missionary Association, left San Francisco on a whaling vessel to establish a new mission among the Eskimos in Northern Alaska. Mr. Thornton was from Virginia and Mr. Lopp from Indiana. On the Fourth of July they arrived at Cape Prince of Wales, the farthest western point on the North American continent. They knew nothing of the people, who had been described as a savage and hostile race. Within ten days they had so far put together the building which they had brought with them that they could shelter themselves. The vessel sailed away, and they were then left in a settlement of about 500 Eskimos.

The natives had never before seen a house and began hammering away at the doors and windows, for they had no idea that they should be kept out. The missionaries, by means of the few words they had learned and by signs, did their best to pacify them. They continued to batter at the doors for several days, but this was found to be simply a matter of curiosity. The Eskimos were really disposed to be friendly instead of being hostile. Within a short time the missionaries had no fears of violence from them, and soon they had gathered a school of some sixty pupils. They found the people with no positive ideas of God or of a future life, and no religious observances.

SCHOOLHOUSE AT CAPE—OWNED BY THE MISSION.

The only danger from the Eskimos was due to their intoxication when they could barter skins for whiskey with sailors from our ships. Then there were some stormy times. When under the influence of drink the people became boisterous and rude and sometimes violent. "We were determined," wrote the missionaries, "not to let the natives see that we were afraid of them; so we taught our school, took our exercise, and went hunting for our fresh meat as usual, finding it much more tolerable to take some risks than to worry ourselves with constant thoughts of danger." Gradually the natives behaved more peaceably.

During the autumn the troubles of the missionaries were complicated by a terrible epidemic of pneumonia which carried off many of the people. The superstitious Eskimos attributed this epidemic to the presence of the strange missionaries. It was really due to a cold west storm which came on as the people were preparing to move from their summer tents to their underground houses for the winter.

TEACHER AND PUPILS.

The mission prospered, however, and the school was largely increased in numbers, despite annoyances by children and adults clambering on the roof of the house, knocking on the walls and yelling at the windows. When it was found that these disturbances could be much reduced by suspending the school for a few days, good order was restored.

When the missionaries had attained sufficient knowledge of the language they began specific religious services. They found that the natives believed, in a vague way, in good and evil spirits—about as children believe in ghosts; but they proved to be receptive of the binding obligations of truthfulness, honesty and other Christian virtues.

The natives were living ten months of the year in underground houses, often damp, always ill-ventilated and ill-lighted, but their open-air exercise in hunting and fishing kept them, upon the whole, stout and hardy and healthy. Without chairs or tables, they ate with their fingers from wooden dishes, sitting on the floor. Their cooking consisted in boiling alone without other condiment than a little seawater. Their dress was mainly of deerskins and sealskins. Inasmuch as these could not be washed they were always infested with vermin.

The missionaries early undertook to introduce houses made with drift-logs, and to improve the condition of the people by bringing in better appliances for the fishing and hunting which secured their livelihood. They dressed themselves in sealskin and deerskin in the Eskimo way, and really suffered no more from the cold than when at home. Hunting with the natives, they found them to be persevering and courageous.

In 1892, Dr. Sheldon Jackson secured an appropriation for introducing reindeer from Siberia into Alaska as a food supply and a means of enabling the natives to become more and more a pastoral people. This nearly seemed to be almost the only hope of their continued existence, for the supplies of food were not only precarious but also decreasing. At the present time there are more than 5,000 reindeer distributed in various centers in Alaska. The largest herd in Alaska is in charge of our mission at Cape Prince of Wales.

In 1892 our missionaries reported a slow but unmistakable growth among the Eskimos in the apprehension of civilized ideas and of godliness. The Sunday church services were well attended. The organ had been found of greatest service. In short, the old superstitions were slowly beginning to give way. The idea that the school bell frightened away the seals was put aside. The chief magic doctor, who stabbed himself in order to secure a good whaling season, found less confidence on the part of the people.

On August 19th of the next year, Mr. Thornton—who in the meantime had married, as had also Mr. Lopp—was awakened about midnight by loud raps at the door. Going to the door upon the idea that someone was sick and needed medicine, he was shot dead by three natives, who were probably crazed by drink. Mrs. Thornton wrote afterwards: "We did not fear the people when they were sober, but when they were drunk we felt the peril." In the morning friendly Eskimos came and lifted the body of her murdered husband to a couch and then carried the terrible news to the settlement. The natives at once went out, hunted down the murderers, killed them and dragged their bodies up to the house, insisting that Mrs. Thornton should come out and look at them and know that they had been punished. There was great mourning in the village. Nearly the whole village came to the door to express their sorrow. They said: "You need not be afraid. We are friends; we will not hurt you."

After this tragedy Mrs. Thornton returned home to this country, and Mr. Lopp with his family continued in successful charge of the mission.

One of the most noteworthy events in the history of this mission was the heroic service of Mr. Lopp in the rescue of three or four hundred sailors at Point Barrow, where the crews of eight trading vessels had been frozen up in the Arctic Ocean. At the request of the Government Mr. Lopp undertook to drive over the wilderness of ice the mission reindeer herd seven hundred miles for the rescue of the ice-imprisoned seamen. It was a perilous journey, and even the Eskimos predicted that he could never reach his destination. "It was a great trial," he wrote, "but we knew we would be remembered at the weekly prayer-meeting of our Eskimo Christians." He was successful in his endeavor, and later on the Government renewed the mission herd to its former number.

The method of the administration of the reindeer herd has been to give yearly a certain number of the deer to those Eskimos who are sufficiently trained to take care of them. This furnishes to them and their associated friends a supply for food, for service and for clothing. There are now nine separate groups owned by the Eskimos, amounting to nearly 1,000 deer, while nearly 600 other deer still remain in direct charge of the mission. This feature has contributed largely to the improvement of the people.

As a result of this fourteen years' missionary ministry, there is now at the Cape a practically transformed community. These Eskimos are already known all along the coast for their morals, industry and a new spirit of enterprise. Many of them are faithful Christians. About one hundred are church members. The missionary school numbers also one hundred pupils. The story of the mission is a striking illustration of the enlightening and saving power of the Gospel.

The most noteworthy articles in the August number of this magazine, published monthly by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 44-60 East 23d Street, cor. Fourth Avenue, New York, are those dealing with the African at home in America and in Africa. Dr. Frissell writes of "What Industrial Education is doing for the Negroes;" Prof. Du Bois on "What Intellectual Education is doing for the Negroes," and Mr. John L. Dubé contrasts the "Condition of the African in America and South Africa." These give a rounded view of Negro education as a partial solution of the Negro problem. There is also an excellent illustrated article on "Working in British East Africa"—a pioneer mission of unusual promise. The September number will contain "What the North is doing for the Negro;" "What the South is doing for the Negro;" "What the Negro is doing for the Negro."

The Missionary Review of the World.

Among the topics treated in the General Missionary Intelligence are the Present State of Forward Movements; Denominational Progress; Tidings from Porto Rico; Congo Reform; Cholera in Arabia; a Message from China; Strategic Centers in Manchuria; Death of François Collard, etc.

The Review gives a fine general view of the Mission Field, and its contents are always valuable and interesting.

The best magazine yet published by the Negroes is The Voice of the Negro. The Voice of the Negro, Atlanta, Ga., and the best number of that magazine is before us. Every intelligent man of the Negro race should subscribe for it. It speaks well for the race. The July number is a broadside by the Negro woman in her own defense. She is the most maligned woman to-day in the world; but, strange to say, not before now has she been called to answer for herself the charges against her. She answers here in a womanly way. She does not make angels of her sex, but shows by statement of fact, argument and illustration that she is just like women of other races under similar circumstances—no better, no worse. In this able symposium the Voice makes a distinct contribution to the discussion of the race question.

A RICH woman dreamed that she went to heaven, and there saw a mansion being built. "Who is that for?" she asked of the guide.

"For your gardener."

"But he lives in the tiniest cottage on earth, with barely room enough for his family. He might live better if he did not give away so much to the miserable poor folk."

Further on she saw a tiny cottage being built.

"And who is that for?" she asked.

"That is for you."

"But I have lived in a mansion on earth. I would not know how to live in a cottage."

The words she heard in reply were full of meaning: "The Master Builder is doing His best with the material that is being sent up."

Then she awoke, resolving to lay up treasure in heaven.

What are we sending up? What kind of material are we building into our everyday life? Is it being sent up?—Zion's Outlook.
